HOLMES & WATSON COUNTRY: Travels in Search of Solutions BERNARD DAVIES

BERNARD DAVIES, perhaps more than anyone else, has applied rigorous scholarship and exhaustive research to investigating the problems and the anomalies that lurk within the chronicles of the Great Detective. As Leslie Klinger, editor of The New Annotated Sherlock Holmes, says:

“Almost fifty years after his first appearance in Holmesian print, Bernard Davies is the dean of Holmesian scholars and the pre-eminent expert in the field of geographical identifications...”

Bernard Davies joined the Sherlock Holmes Society of London in 1958 and immediately established himself as a serious force in the Great Game, with his paper “Was Holmes a Londoner?” — quickly followed by “The Back Yards of Baker Street”, which unarguably established the true site of No. 221B.

Since then he has researched the places and the people concerned in two dozen or more of Sherlock Holmes’s investigations. He has determined the date of The Sign of Four, settled the vexed question of the detective’s university, uncovered his ancestry, thrown light on his career on the stage...

Bernard Davies’s essays are researched with meticulous care, presented with clarity, and written with wit and an engaging enthusiasm. This handsome collection, in two large hardback volumes, illustrated with more than fifty maps, is essential reading.

Holmes and Watson Country is available in a limited edition of 200 copies, at £30.00. There is also a special collectors’ edition of 25 copies, the two volumes in an attractive slipcase, and both signed by the author, at £50.00. The special edition will be available on a first-come first-serve basis and will be limited to one per applicant.

The book will be officially launched on 14 October but advance orders are welcome particularly for the special collectors’ editions.

Postage (by airmail outside the UK) is extra. The inclusive prices are:
